

New pacifier design encourages motor skills

Binxy™, a new pacifier, is mom-invented, dishwasher safe, and will be made in the United States using materials approved by the FDA. Mother's Cubbard, the manufacturer, reports Binxy™ is a lightweight pacifier with a rubbery, flexible design that supports the motor skill development of babies three months old and older.

It is easy for a baby to see, grab, hold, and use the Binxy™, which maximizes a three month old baby's natural ability to grasp. It also helps to promote confidence, independence, finger dexterity, hand-eye coordination, and helps reduce frustration from dropped pacifiers.

The pacifier will come with a recyclable, replaceable nipple cover to keep it clean when not in use and will come in four bright colors with two different nipple sizes and styles. The 3-to-6 month size is a cherry (round) style nipple so that breastfed babies don't get "nipple confusion" and the 6-to-12 month size is fitted with an orthopedic nipple. All nipples are 100 percent silicone and made in Germany. Binxy™ is 3.5-in. in diameter and weighs about the same as a standard pacifier. Suggested retail price is $9 to $11.

Fairytale Wishes makes dreams come true

Fairytale Wishes Inc. offers a line of nature-based aromatherapy sprays designed to help ease common childhood anxieties like being afraid of the dark (Sweet Dreams spray), fear of monsters (Monster Repellent), or homesickness at camp (Happy Camper Spray). Also available is a Super Hero Spray for any occasion or to combat fear of the first day of school, performing in front of an audience, a trip to the doctor, or other common childhood fears.

Debbie Glickman spent months searching for a remedy to help her two young children overcome bedtime anxieties. Books, night lights, and warm milk at bedtime—nothing worked. Then, after reading about lavender's attributes as a soothing and calming therapy, she developed a lavender spray for their pillows. "I told them a story of how the magical spray will make scary thoughts go away, and it worked like a dream," says Glickman.
